PREVENTION OF FOREST FIRES URGED BY FILM

Sheffield, Feb. 25—An early harbinger of spring was evidenced at the regular February meeting of the Sheffield Volunteer Fire Department last night when many pictures stressing the importance of forest fire prevention and showing methods of combating such fires were shown.

The movies in sound, are the property of the federal Department of Agriculture, and are being shown in Pennsylvania under the auspices of the State Department of Forests and Waters. Jay Pees, of Warren, state forest inspector, was in charge of the presentation here last night, which included the following four films: "Trees and the Wind," "Operation of a Forest Nursery," "The Tree of Life," "Stop Forest Fires."

The local fire department is one of the auxiliary forest fire fighting crews in the county and is readying itself for service along that line. Melvin Sauter is in charge.

There were 30 members present at the meeting, which was held in the township building and was conducted by J. J. Wolfe, vice president.

SALVATION ARMY HAS SUCCESSFUL JUBILEE EVENT

With final events on the Salvation Army's Golden Jubilee program completed Monday, Warren Salvationists today expressed appreciation to the many friends and groups lending their services to help make possible a series of services which were very helpful and interesting in their nature and results.

The divisional commander, Major William G. Harris, gave freely of his time and ability in the eight messages delivered during the three day jubilee. The combined attendance at meetings and groups addressed by Major Harris exceeded 1,750 persons. In the course of these messages, the major drew from his personal experience with the Royal Air Force in the last World War, his missionary experience in Java among the lepers, Central Celebes with the head hunters, executive, editorial and staff work of the Salvation Army in this part of the United States for a wealth of illustrations to back the plain preaching of the gospel in the various discourses.

Warren churches were most hearty in their co-operation, including opening of pulpits to Army speakers and attending citadel services. Burgess R. W. Steber and each department of the borough government did their full share to promote the success of the undertaking, as did Warren Community Chest, the service clubs, the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. schools, A. B. Scouts, Fraternal societies and many other groups.

During the anniversary several objectives were announced, including efforts to secure a modest amount of new equipment during the jubilee year, in addition to definite objectives in evangelistic and welfare service.

For the immediate week of the jubilee was announced a goal of fifty dollars would be set to care for some of the more urgent requirements of the frigid weather season. Mention was made of this gift of ten dollars toward this objective and that gift coming from the sick bed of Father Joseph H. Diamond, which with a note of greeting, read with other messages, accompanied a beautiful bouquet of flowers used as a centerpiece for the platform, and coming from the same donor.

Several members of Company I were present at some of the services and a few took part in the program, some being numbered among the converts of the week-end.

Special thanks was expressed to Carroll Meyer and the capella for their good singing and to the following Scouts of Troop 9: James Richards, Charles Swanson, Forest Bainbridge and Norman Cable. These scouts with the leader, Ray Lewis, were on duty throughout the entire anniversary service on Sunday afternoon.

SCOUT SERVICE AT YOUNGVILLE IS IMPRESSIVE

Youngville, Feb. 25—The local Boy Scout troop attended church Sunday night at a union service in their honor in the Methodist church. The Scripture and prayer service was given by Rev. Dwight Jack from the text, "Reverence Not Thy Youth." A large rustic cross was placed in front of the church, with a place for twelve red candles at its base and a blue candle at each point of the cross. At the close of the sermon these were lighted by the boys, the entire group of boys giving the Scout oath. It was the most impressive service. The troop was accompanied by their Scoutmaster and his assistant, Fred Jaffin, and Walter Sheffer.

OUTSTANDING DOUBLE FEATURE AT LIBRARY
WEDNESDAY & THURSDAY

"What a Life"
"Life with Henry," the Aldrich Family picture which again features Jackie Coogan in the role of Henry Aldrich which will be the attraction Wednesday and Thursday at the Library Theatre, was made following his great success in the first Henry Aldrich picture adapted from the Broadway play, "What a Life."

"Life with Henry" is an original story resulting from the collaboration of playwright Clifford Goldsmith and scenarist Don Hartman. It continues the comic, sometimes heart-tugging, but always well-meant misadventures of the hapless Henry, a typical high school lad with a faculty of getting into difficulties, "because," as he will explain, "he's a misunderstanding."

Its action takes place in the Aldrich household, roams his home town of Centerville, and goes as far as Chicago for a sequence.

"Tall, Dark and Handsome"
Leo Robin and Ralph Rainger, one of America's top tune teams, have four numbers in "Tall, Dark and Handsome," 20th Century-Fox film, coming Wednesday and Thursday to the Library Theatre, with handsome Cesar Romero heading a brilliant featured cast.

Lovely Virginia Gilmore sings two of them, "Hello, Ma! I Done It Again," and "Wishful Thinking." Charlotte Greenwood sings the other two, "I'm Alive and Kickin'," and "Did I Hve Fun?"

McPHERRAN EXPLAINS
NEW NO TRUMP BID
IN SIX ARTICLES

Hand 1

Hand 6

BY WM. E. MCKENNEY
America's Card Authority

After writing the series of articles on the McPheran No Trump, I asked "Bobby" McPheran to give me six hands he had played in recent tournaments, in which the McPheran No Trump convention had been employed.

Today's is the first of the six hands.

The McPheran opening bid of one no trump is made on two different types of hands. Type No. 1 is a hand with a "no trump pattern" but with less honor trick strength than is required for an opening suit bid. Type No. 2 is a hand with one long suit, of six cards or more, with strength in it sufficient for an "out" bid if necessary, but usually not enough strength for an opening suit bid.

South's hand today is typical of the No. 2 type on which McPheran opens with one no trump. North's jump takeout of three spades says: "Partner, there is a sure game in our cards if your hand is of type No. 1." The jump overall is thus a force if the opening bidder has the sub-minimum type of hand. If he holds the freak suit type, he must use his judgment how to respond to the jump overall.

South's holding of three spades, a singleton diamond, and the club ace justified him in carrying the contract to four spades. With one spade and three diamonds, he would simply have passed.

In the play North lost one heart and one diamond, making five odd.

NO TRUMP SYSTEM BLOCKS OPPONENTS' WINNING CONTRACT

In today's hand Bobby McPheran employed his No. 2 freak type of hand, and was successful in keeping his vulnerable opponents from getting in a four-heart contract. Over one no trump, West's hand was a little too light to overcall with two hearts. East of course found his hand too weak with a passing partner, to enter the bidding at three hearts.

North's response of two spades over one no trump, using the McPheran convention, said, "Part-

Man About Manhattan

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—When you spend your time kicking around Broadway and sitting in smoky restaurants talking to comedians, prizefighters, and detectives or hanging around theater doors and taxicab stands, you hear a lot of stories.

When these stories seem funny to me, or amusing, or merely interesting, I pass them along. I intend to keep right on passing them along, though let me warn you here and now that most "new" stories are variations of old themes and are seldom literally true.

A few days ago I relayed the story of the girl at a theater who mistakenly offered some fertilizer tablets to another young woman with an annoying cough, thinking they were coughdrops. This story had been passed to me by an advertising man who said it happened to his secretary. He even named the play she went to see.

No one in this office had heard the story. I always test stories like this on my colleagues in the office. But after I had used it there came a sudden chorus of complaints, and one reader sent me a clipping showing this same story, with minor variations, as it appeared in his newspaper at least four months ago. This time it was a New Orleans woman who had passed the "coughdrops" to a cold victim in a Baton Rouge, La., theater.

THE gist of these complaints was that I had been guilty of passing along "stale" news. So I went over to see my friend Ed Wynn, who, besides being a great comedian, is one of the world's best authorities on jokes and their roots. It was Mark Twain who said that all stories are variations of only seven themes. Ed

Annual Father and Son Banquet of Y. M. C. A. is Enjoyable Affair; Talk on Indian Lore is Feature

Fellowship and festivity reigned throughout the commodious dining room of the Young Men's Christian Association last evening when dads and their boys in the number of 180 gathered for the annual father and son banquet. With a delectable chicken dinner and all the trimmings and, to the delight of the boys, topped off with ice cream and cake, nothing had been left undone to add to the pleasure of the guests. Each table was enhanced with a plant, provided through the courtesy of Victor H. Offel, florist.

The invocation was given by the Rev. Martin Hamlin, of the Calvary Baptist church.

Harold S. Hampson, local attorney, made a most efficient toastmaster and interspersed the program with several humorous stories to the delight of the mixed crowd of boys and men.

Mr. Hampson introduced T. F. Eppley, boys' work secretary, who briefly extended a cordial welcome to the group in behalf of the Y. M. C. A. staff. He stated that it was gratifying to see so many fathers and sons present sharing in an evening of fun and fellowship.

Next introduced was Alan Babcock who gave the "Toast to Fathers." He said "we hope that we may show by our actions that we appreciate what our fathers are doing for us each day and that our love for them will equal their love to us."

In response the "Toast to the Sons" was capably given by Chas. Erickson who read a poem appropriate to the occasion.

The principal address of the evening was given by Charles E. Congdon, a member of the bar of Cattaraugus County, New York.

residing in Salamanca, who spoke on the subject "Punkin' Shakes and Snow Snakes." Mr. Congdon has made a life-long hobby of the study of local history, particularly of the Seneca Indians on the Allegheny Indian reservation, and is a recognized authority everywhere on the legends and traditions of these Indians.

Knowing the Indian language and being able to speak it, he revealed many of their expressions and told of the various ceremonies and dances and how they came into being. These ceremonies such as New Year, Strawberry and Harvest Festivals as well as the dances are given as a sacrament to gain the favor of the spirits for their crops and are traditions of many years.

The speaker displayed several articles used by the Indians including "snow snakes" which they use in a game of sport. These resemble long poles and can be thrown over the snow for a distance of a quarter of a mile by one who knows how to handle them, he said.

In concluding his address he praised the Y. M. C. A. and its wonderful work and expressed his desire for many more occasions as the father and son banquet, after which the toastmaster presented him a book as a token of appreciation.

Robert Trummer pleased the large gathering with a number of accordion solos and during the program group singing was enjoyed with Leon Christensen and Harold Carlson as song leaders and accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Kathryn Randall.

The benediction was pronounced by Adam Yerg.

ly was in the air raid shelter at the actual time when the bomb fell, but came out to find their house and most of their possessions gone.

"Several other layettes are only waiting for the arrival of the little ones whose mothers are suffering so grievously. One mother of three came from Guernsey. She left her home and came with only what they were wearing so that she had to wash the children's clothes at night and put them on the next day, until, we provided them all with complete outfits."

"If you could only meet these people and see for yourself their calm courage and cheerfulness, never a word of complaint or suggestion of surrender from one of them, you could not fail to realize how deserving they are of any help you can give and how worth while is the work that you are doing."

The Warren County Chapter of the American Red Cross is helping in this great work. This week the workers are packing layettes which have been made by the local workers and in a few days 125 layettes will be shipped from the local headquarters.

On display in the center aisle at the Metzger-Wright store is a complete layette made by the Red Cross workers. The method of packing and shipping is shown.

More workers are needed for this work while undertaking and at present there is an urgent call for cutters to prepare the material to be sent out to the different units.

Grim Picture of Civilian Life In England Contained in Letter

A grim but moving picture of civilian life in Great Britain, under the stress of wartime conditions, is contained in a letter to the American Red Cross from a voluntary relief worker in Plymouth, one of the ports reported subjected to terrific air bombardment.

The text of this letter is made public by the local Red Cross headquarters to emphasize the practical importance of the supplies forwarded to the British Isles for civilian relief.

"We have received here in Plymouth for our air raid victims a large case containing 25 layettes and two cases of clothing, all gifts, and most welcome ones from all you kind people for whose sympathy we are more than grateful."

"I thought perhaps it would interest you to hear something of their final destination and also to know how tremendously your goodness is appreciated by the recipients of your gifts."

"The first layette was given to the young widow of a soldier home on leave from the front, who went out during a raid to offer his help to policeman on duty nearby, and both were instantly killed. Her baby was born in the military hospital about a fortnight later, and is now wearing your lovely little garments."

"The second one went two days ago to the baby daughter of a marine now in Iceland, who was decorated for gallantry at Narvik and whose young wife was in her mother's house during a raid, but escaped injury as the whole fam-

ALONG CAME CINDERELLA

By VIVIAN GREY

YESTERDAY: Roger Cosgrave had thought the worst of it was over. He had thought that his fiancée, Emily Perry, was breaking her engagement, because she knew Roger was in love with Lovely Daye, the girl from the tenement district he had met by accident a few days earlier. But now Emily's distraught mother had called to say that Emily has changed her mind; she is not giving Roger up.

Chapter 18 Emily Rebels

ROGER'S weary face became a shade more pale.

"I don't see why she has to call you. This is between Emily and me."

"I know," Marcia began slowly. "You'd almost think," she paused, not wishing to voice the dark thought even in the privacy of her own home. Roger, not noticing, went on:

"If it hadn't been for Mrs. Perry there might never have been an engagement between Emily and me."

Marcia looked at her son intently but made no reply.

In the Perry house Della had turned from the telephone to be confronted by her daughter. Emily's face was pale and tight. There was the same pale tightness in her voice as she spoke:

"You've been talking to Roger's mother? Oh, how can you? How can you? Haven't I been cheated and humiliated enough without your doing that?"

"You cheapened and humiliated!" Bitterly from the lips of the older woman. "You haven't you a thought for anyone else? Your father and I have given our very souls to you."

Emily's voice was interrupting madly: "You shouldn't have done it! I never asked for any of the things you gave me! If you were going to ask me to hand over my life to you in return for it, why did you do it?"

"Well, why should I be grateful? What for? Gratitude is for gifts freely given! You would mortgage my heart and soul for what you've done for me. Can't you see?" Her father appeared quietly in the door.

"She's right," Della," he said to his wife, and Emily was struck by the weariness in his voice. "We've had no right to try to make Emily's life. We never should have given her anything we couldn't afford to give freely without any thought of what she'd make of it."

Della Perry turned to her husband like an angry wild cat about to attack. Suddenly something stopped her. She seemed to wilt.

"All right," she said, "go your way."

Emily went to her room and got her coat and hat. She would make the thing final and definite before there could be any more talk.

Society Stir

A FEW lines of type in a New York paper announced that Emily and Roger had broken their engagement by mutual consent. A great many people who had marked wedding gifts put them away and hoped some other friend with a similar initial would be getting married before too long.

"All that good effort wasted," said one of the girl's who'd given a party for Emily.

"Butt, your chops, darling!" from another. "What have you got to kick about? Look at poor Emily. It isn't as if we didn't all know about the new rave Roger's got."

"Yeah, that's it. You work like a coal heaver trying to land a man and then maybe you don't get him!"

At the Cosgraves' no one said very much more about it. Only Amelia reminded Roger once more of the impossibility of making a silk purse of a sow's ear and then added: "But she has a sort of gutter loveliness, if that means anything to you."

Roger's marriage to Lovely took place at Roger's home and was announced by his parents. The tabloids played up Lovely's background and beauty.

They called her the Cinderella girl. Lovely cut out all of the pictures and stories and proudly put them on her wall. Gert and Joe talked of its elegance to their friends for weeks after.

Katie Conner was there too. "Didn't I always say you'd make the grade?" she asked Lovely. Beautiful in the wedding gown Marcia Cosgrave had gotten for her. "Gee it's swell you've got all this. Happy!" she asked.

"Happy? We even sing before breakfast, don't we Roger?" and Lovely went into a mad snatch of rug cutting and talked a song as she caught the strain the orchestra was playing.

Marcia Cosgrave watched in amusement.

"She's certainly beautiful," she said to Roger later.

And Lovely said of Marcia when she and Roger were alone: "Your mother's swell. I know how she must have felt. She'd planned all sorts of grand things for you, and now there's just me. She can take it. She's swell. I hope I never let her down." Her face clouded only momentarily on that.

"You won't. We won't, darling," was Roger's reply.

Lovely looked at him thoughtfully.

"I hope you know, sweetie-pie," she said slowly.

Roger was deeply happy. It looked as if Marcia and Lovely were going to be friends.

While the party was still at its peak Lovely and Roger slipped out to the kennels. Blue Streak was soon to follow. She lifted soft, adoring brown eyes to Roger as he stroked her silky blue-gray coat. Blue Blaze, king of the kennels, looked on with concern.

Roger's hands moved over Streak knowingly.

"You're swell, old girl," he said kindly. "Going to hand us a champ?"

Streak rested her head against his hand and then sniffed Lovely curiously as she stroked her soft coat.

"Oh, Roger, should we stay and see her through it? Lovely asked impulsively. "She looks at you as if you're her God. Maybe we should."

"Lovely!" Roger's arms were around her. "How generous of you, darling. I'll remember that all my life. But I can't postpone my wedding trip even a moment. Come on, sweet, we'd better get going."

Winthrop Ramsey waited until Roger had released Lovely before he appeared from the next room of the kennels.

"She's in fine shape," he said. "Streak I mean. She should give us some swell pups. You haven't a thing to worry about. Let's go."

Streak, then, his eyes suddenly coming to rest on Lovely. It was the first time the Cosgrave dog handler had seen Lovely. He was like a man struck dumb.

Roger introduced his bride and then said easily: "We'll see you when we get back. Meantime take good care of the animals."

Roger glanced at Lovely as they walked back toward the house. She was startlingly beautiful. It was something more than beauty. He'd have to get used to seeing men completely bowled over when they first saw her.

Hectic Honeymoon

IN ACAPULCO, Mexico, Roger and Lovely lay on the warm sands of Los Hornos beach every afternoon and soaked in sun.

Roger thought, looking at his beautiful fiancée: "She's the most beautiful thing in the world. I'll never stop thrilling at the thought that she's mine. God help me to keep her happy all ways!"

Lovely lay, eyes closed, the dashing of the surf a tropical obbligato to her thinking. "I'm lucky! Lucky! Everything in the world I want! Clothes, jewels, a handsome husband and love!" She opened her eyes just as a handsome Mexican strolled past and thought idly: "Some look! Wonder what he'd be like?"

Then she rolled violently toward Roger, starting a roughhouse which every one on the beach paused to watch. Lovely's cry of "Down!" was her signal for a rush to the water with Roger close behind.

"Those two Americans—how terribly in love they must be!" "It's so good looking. And she's—fascinating is the best word for her."

"Yeah," from a show girl from the States who was singing in one of the little night spots near the Square, "she's fascinating all right. She's got to be just like a young cobra in his life. But he's crazy about her." And her hard, slightly weary eyes studied Lovely intently. "I've seen somebody like her somewhere," she muttered to herself.

When finally they gathered their things and went happily back to the car, Roger drove swiftly to the hill to a cottage on a crash high up above the pounding blue ocean. Waiting for her on the brightly lighted piazza that faced the patio, Roger felt his heart lift and tremble.

They dined usually at the hotel on the crags across the park. Or sometimes at El Jardine halfway down the hill. Wherever it was they were sure of being the center of attention.

After dinner they'd stroll the crooked, narrow streets, Lovely with a gay little shawl pulled around her shoulders while she bought and bought. "I'm so happy," she said to Katie. And: "Oh, darling, that gorgeous handloomed stuff for Gert!" And then, turning to Roger all wistful tenderness: "And sweetie pie would you mind if I sent these handkerchiefs to Mrs. Hulise. Joe's mother? She's probably never had a present through the mail in all her life!"

"My darling!" Roger's voice was muted by swiftly rising emotion. "Anything. Anything you want." And he might even lift her hand and brush it with his lips, standing in the moon silvered dusk of a Mexican market at night, so humbled was he by the quick overpouring generosity of her. Roger liked just to stand and watch her.

Finally they'd wind up in a night spot. A night spot to which the wars of Europe had sent the loveliest, the smartest, toughest, and most celebrated women in the world.

Any of them all Lovely was the one who attracted most attention, swirling madly in a ridiculous red, white and blue dress, or sitting at a table looking like a blossom of the tropics.

Roger was proud of her arresting beauty, happy to have the wherewithal to give it the proper setting. He would think as he looked at her dancing with someone they'd met:

"And all of her beauty isn't on the outside either. She's beautiful inside, too. From her heart out."

Sometimes he wished she wouldn't dance with the native young men. When he voiced such a wish her face became a beautiful frown.

"But, darling, go on! You're such perfect dancers. You're not jealous, Roger? You're not?" And she'd nestle close to him and he'd lose all power of resistance to her any wish.

YESTERDAY: Although it hurt his fiancée, Emily Perry, deeply, and caused a tempest in her family, Roger Cosgrave has refused to give up the girl he met by accident one day. She is Lovely Daye, and to balance the fact that she has no family background, she has really great beauty. Now Roger and Lovely are in Mexico on their honeymoon, and Lovely is enjoying every instant. She is also, Roger thinks indulgently, dancing rather too much with the young Mexicans.

Chapter 19 Amarilla Lily

ROGER was standing at the bar one night when an American next to him watched Lovely too closely.

"These Latinos surely do fall for a blonde," he said to Roger. "And she's a real one. No converted Nordic there. Vikings in them that ancestry! And she's got what it takes. She's laying 'em low with a look. I'm in the show business in New York. Like to have her look me up some day. Know who she is?"

"She's my wife," Roger said stiffly.

The stranger looked at Roger queerly.

"No offense, stranger," And Roger knew it was time for Lovely to stop playing around at night spots with young Mexicans.

He spoke about it when they got back to their cottage just before dawn.

"So what?" Lovely asked sleepily. "I'm to stop dancing. And I love it. I thought we came down here for a good time." She stretched her hands high in the air and drew her lovely body up with the grace of a cat.

"We did. And I want you to have a good time. But must that mean so much dancing with young Mexicans? They're respectable, you know."

"But darling, they're such marvelous dancers!"

Roger bent to kiss her good night, and Lovely's arms caught him and held him closely.

"Darling, you don't want to spoil my good time, do you?" Her voice was a low voluptuous purr.

"No," Roger agreed after a moment. "Of course not, Lovely. You know I adore you and want you to have everything in the world you want."

It was impossible to deny her anything.

"But don't fall in love with any of them," he warned her playfully.

"Love! My darling! A delightful scorn in her voice. "As if I would. You don't have to love a man to enjoy dancing with him. And, besides, sweetie pie, there's you."

There's you! Just the way she said it was enough for the man. He never ceased to thrill over her.

Sleeping most of every morning, dawdling over elaborate, slowly served combinations of Mexican breakfast and lunch, going daily to the beach, Roger had neglected his mail. Letters had come that must be answered. At dinner in El Jardine Roger said:

"Could you sit in the patio this evening darling and watch the moon and the gardener at work making things beautiful for you while your husband writes some letters?"

"Oh, Roger, not tonight! It's a perfect night to go somewhere! Some other time."

"But I've neglected them as long as I can dear."

"Tomorrow morning then!"

"After being up all night, practically, I'll be sleeping tomorrow morning."

"Telegraph them then."

"Darling, I've got letters to write!" with attempted sternness.

But Lovely was just as firm in her wish to play. And so two young men at the next table who had come from Mexico City in their big car at just about the time Lovely and Roger arrived leaned over to suggest that Lovely go with them, and that Roger join them when his letters were finished.

"Perfect!" Lovely said impulsively, and Roger was impulsive to do but more. He spoke in fluent Spanish, thanking them, and asking them to look well after Lovely. He trusted the men. They were both slightly older than he and as much Spanish grandees as if they had worn silk stockings and knee breeches, white ruffs and lace at their cuffs.

They left him, Lovely calling back to Roger:

"Look for us where you find us darling—if not in one spot in another." And that wouldn't be too difficult, because Acapulco is a quaint little handkerchief of a town.

Ordered Out

LOVELY'S escorts took her to a spot run by a woman called Amarilla Lily. Roger and Lovely had been there often but he had seen the proprietress fleetingly only the first time they were there, though she was known the length and breadth of Mexico as the gayest of hostesses.

Lovely was to exhibit a dance mounted to an exhibition dance with a young Mexican when Amarilla appeared in the door at the back. There was suddenly something electric in the atmosphere. Amarilla's big voice came out in deep compelling waves.

"You, Pedro! Stop that dancing!" Her hand clamped the orchestra. "And you, American, go home to your husband and don't come here unless you come with him!"

Lovely stopped dancing and stared, the chiffon of her full skirt still moving. She saw her escorts on their feet.

"Am I being ordered out?" she asked, facing the woman frankly.

"But why? We're paying our bills! Come on, boys, strike up the band!" with a gesture to the orchestra.

But no sound came from their strings. Amarilla had looked at them. She was walking slowly toward Lovely.

"You can't order me out of here," Lovely said, half laughing. "I have a right to be here."

"Get out," Amarilla was saying slowly, softly under her breath but with strange force. "Get out. Out I say. Back to your husband and don't come here again without him."

Lovely's escorts were beside her. They were anxious to avoid any more of a scene. The older of the two men made her understand that it had happened because everyone liked her too much. That was the trouble. And perhaps they had better take her back to her husband. So they put her in their big car and drove up the hill. When they asked her what she would tell Roger she surprised them by saying frankly:

"Why the truth, of course. That I've been put out of a night club. Now isn't that something?" She turned to them and asked: "Are wives always chaperoned that way in Mexico?"

"It is stranger than anything I know," said the older of the two shrugging.

Roger thanked the men for bringing Lovely home unexpectedly early.

"What happened darling?" he asked.

Lovely told him.

"Um," Roger said thoughtfully. "She is probably a very wise woman. I'm never comfortable when you're with some other man. You have a face, darling, that would liquidate any man's resolution. You're too beautiful."

Secretly he was glad Amarilla had used strong arm methods but he was puzzled as to why, since the two men she had gone with were named everywhere.

"I'm going back there some day and make her eat those words or tell me why," Lovely said sleepily and dismissed the incident.

Pedro

LOVELY continued to live her days in a fever of activity. Shopping, swimming, dancing. Shopping, swimming, dancing. Round and round she went. Always in a hurry to get from one activity to another. Her audacious kept the Americans in the little resort town gasping and gossiping.

Roger was beginning to wonder how the dogs were at home. How Blue Streak's puppies were coming along. If there was show stuff in the litter. And in addition, a letter from his mother brought news that made him ponder.

"Don't be surprised," wrote Marcia, "if you run into the Perrys. They have started for Mexico, and of all things in that huge old Rolls. Emily wanted them to take her because it is in better repair, and Kar offered our coupe. But they refused it and have started out in that relic. They'll probably have to buy a new car before they get back. We insisted that they go. They needed a change so. They couldn't seem to get adjusted again."

Roger knew what she had said most written there—"after your breaking off with Emily."

His mother had added: "Emily stayed with us for a week and now she's in the city looking for a job."

Emily looking for a job. Emily working. Roger couldn't imagine it. Lovely, poised, fragile Emily. He felt it wasn't even quite right. She didn't need that money. She shouldn't take a job from some girl who needed it. He couldn't understand Emily's being that ruthless.

The next night Roger saw Pedro at the bar of the night club they were visiting. He said:

"Pedro again, dear. Don't dance with him tonight. He's too young and he looks too earnest."

"Don't be silly! Pedro knows I'm married to you and that's that."

"I wish I could feel as sure about that as you do."

Lovely laughed softly, but the laughter died from her eyes when young Pedro, without breaking the rhythm, said to her:

"To-day I have taken from the bank all my money. Now, in a minute, we go together."

Lovely looked at him blankly and missed a step.

"Oh, but Pedro, my husband! I'm married. I never dreamed—"

But Pedro was interrupting gently. "So it is. I know. I have a boat waiting. A little boat but quite safe, that will take us across to Puerto Marques. There we can hide—I know the place—for days, months, for years until we are forgotten." An intense note in his voice almost frightened Lovely.

"Oh, Pedro," she said not quite steadily. "I'm sorry. So sorry. We haven't either of us understood. I didn't mean it. I love my husband."

But Pedro was looking at her with his broken heart in his soft dark eyes.

"You haven't loved me?" he asked softly.

"No Pedro, no. Miserably. I haven't loved anyone."

"I am sorry," the youth drew himself up and spoke stiffly. "I have misunderstood." He gravely took Lovely's hand then, pulled it through his arm, took her back to Roger and without a word walked quickly out of the place.

RIVER TONNAGE INCREASES

Pittsburgh—(P.)—Gross tonnage carried on the Monongahela river during the month of December, 1940, exceeded by more than a half-million tons the freight carried through the Panama Canal, figures compiled at the U. S. engineers office show. During that month an all-time record was established when 2,969,000 short tons of freight were carried on the river, about 585,000 tons more than transported through the canal during the same period.

All of this tonnage—mostly in coal and steel—originated in mills and mines along the river. The engineers said.

They don't need a key."

YOUR INCOME TAX

WHO IS THE HEAD OF THE FAMILY

For income tax purposes there can be only one head of a family. In addition to being the chief financial support, the head of a family must be related by blood, marriage, or adoption to his dependents, and he must have a legal or moral obligation to exercise family control over them and provide for their care. As such he is entitled to the same exemption allowed a married person—$2,000.

There are some unusual cases under this classification. A single person, who supports and maintains in one household one or more individuals who are closely connected with him by blood, by marriage, or by adoption, and who has the right to exercise family control and provide them with a common home and furnishes the chief support, the latter may not claim the exemption.

Another example not so much out of the usual is this: A widower who supports in his household his aged mother and his child 17 years of age is the head of a family, and as such he is entitled to an exemption of $2,000 and a credit of $800 for two dependents.

Not infrequently a case like this is reported: It involves the support of an indigent adult by a single person who is morally and legally obligated to provide a home for this individual. In such a case the exemption as the head of a family may be allowed—the circumstances of each case are considered in making the determination. If the individual so supported is not financially dependent, even though the taxpayer maintains a common home and furnishes the chief support, the latter may not claim the exemption.

A taxpayer who supports in his home his minor children over whom he exercises family control is classified as the head of a family, even though the children may have an income of their own sufficient for their maintenance. If he does not support them, by reason of their own income, but does exercise family control, he cannot be classified as the head of a family.

FAREWELL PARTIES FOR GEORGE POPE

Mr. and Mrs. George West entertained at their home, 809 Fourth avenue Saturday evening, with a farewell party for the latter's brother, George Pope, volunteer for selective service training. Games were played and prizes awarded the winners. When the hostess served refreshments late in the evening the honored guest was presented with a purse of money.

On Sunday evening Mrs. West gave a six o'clock dinner in his honor inviting relatives and a few intimate friends.

SUCCESSFUL PARTY FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

One of the most successful parties given this season at the Y. W. C. A. was the Washington party on Saturday evening, attended by 181 and with the Men About Town furnishing the music. The special feature of the evening was a Jitterbug Dance by Fowler Spindel and Patty Hand, and a version of the Cuban Dance by Clair Newhall and Betty Dobson.

An added and very much enjoyed attraction was the serving of refreshments provided by the committee: Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sires, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Templeton, and the general secretary, Mrs. J. H. West.

STUDENT RECITAL AT CONSERVATORY

A number of special selections featured the weekly student recital at the Warren Conservatory of Music, these including "Andante and Scherzino" for two pianos, played by Eleanor Klinefelter and Meredith Young; piano solos by Shirley Johnson, Alberta Sears, Sally Bapp, Helen Rose Spattifer and Dean Blair; duet by Betty Kolpen and Lillian Larsen; a Chopin "Valse" played by Marian Kndier; two songs in fine voice and interpretation by Agnes Kathleen Monroe; the second number having been written by a well known lawyer in Atlanta, William Arnaud, a former pupil of Dr. LeRoy B. Campbell; choral quartet, Virginia Johnson, Russell Norris, Billy Blair and Wilmer Latshaw.

In addition the following regular pupils were heard: Joyce Dalrymple, Marjorie Randall, Jimmy Cochener, Frances Ann Carlson, Harriet Holmberg, Jane Garber, Doris Bauer, Dean Blair and Peggy Henderson, piano, Barbara Knapp, flute.

Shoe Buyer Becomes Manager of Warren Store For One Week

On the tenth anniversary of his affiliation with the Metzger-Wright Company store in Warren, Claude Landers, buyer of shoes, became manager of the store for one week during the absence of W. H. Wright.

Mr. Landers started to work for the C. H. Smith Company in Sheffield in June, 1916 in the grocery department, later being transferred to the shoe department.

In December, 1917, he enlisted in the army where he served until August, 1919. Thirteen months of this time was spent overseas.

When he returned, he resumed his duties with the Metzger-Wright Company, of Sheffield, and was made manager of the shoe department, where he worked until February 24, 1931, when he was transferred to the Warren store as buyer in the shoe department.

PARTICIPATE IN SEW AND SAVE WEEK—MAKE THIS ANNE ADAMS SAILOR DRESS!

Join the Navy and be a new-season style success! For there's something about a "sailor lass" two-piece frock that is really irresistible. This style, designed by Anne Adams, is a perfect pattern for National Sew and Save Week, which is observed from February 22 to March 1. You can make it up very inexpensively and in jig-time at home or at your local sewing center where all those time-saving dressmaking year tails may be learned. The patriotic color scheme so popular this year has been carried out by using crisp white rayon for the long yoke, blouse, cadet blue for the pannelled skirt, sailor collar, cuffs and low-bustle pockets and vermilion red bands for accent. This Pattern, 4665, available in sizes 11 to 17, 22 to 28, is a typical example of the stunning Anne Adams styles featured regularly by us.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins for this Anne Adams Pattern. Write plainly SIZE, NAME, ADDRESS and STYLE NUMBER. Send your order to Warren Times-Mirror, Pattern Department, 243 West 17th Street, New York, N. Y.

Senator Gillette (D-Iowa) one of the first senators to emerge from the committee's closed session, said committee action on all the projects was unanimous.

Before the committee's action, it was estimated that the $4,700,000 authorization in the bill for Guam, located about 1,300 miles from Japan, was not intended for fortification or establishment of submarine or air bases.

An authorization of $8,100,000 for Samoa, some 3,000 miles south of Guam, Moreel added, would establish an air base there which could handle "one squadron (12) of amphibian planes."

collaborate with Germany and Italy. In East Africa, the British announced the capture of the port of Brava, Italian Somaliland, putting British troops within 150 miles of the capital, Mogadiscio.

A British communique also declared that Ethiopian irregulars had taken Moyale, on the Ethiopia-Kenya frontier, and thus "the last Italian troops have been evicted from British territory."

The Italians captured Moyale last July, before Britain unleashed her counter offensive carrying out Prime Minister Churchill's threat to tear Italy's African empire "to tatters and shreds."

In Athens, a government spokesman declared that Greece "will not cease fighting until the Italians are out of Albania"—thereby apparently countering reports that Greece might yield to German pressure for a quick peace with Italy.

The British likened the heavy, concentrated attack to the German tactics in assaults on Coventry and Swansea.

Several persons were reported killed in scattered German attacks overnight on East Angles. London had a night alarm, but there were no reports of bombings there.

France continued her government revisions with creation of a big-five cabinet and a delegate general for German-French negotiations.

Commons Has Explanation on Mediation

"The Japanese minister for foreign affairs in subsequent public statements—made, he said, after consulting Germany—has indicated that his words were not to be regarded as an offer of mediation in the European war."

"In any case the Japanese minister for foreign affairs has been informed by the prime minister that in a cause of the kind for which we are fighting—a cause in no way concerned with territory, trade or material gains, but affecting the whole future of humanity—there can be no question of compromise or parity."

The chamber echoed with cheers when Butler finished. His state department reply to Laborite (Rory) Davies' demand for "the precise terms of the offer made by Japan to mediate between the belligerents in the present war and the reply of his majesty's government."

Butler on Feb. 19 announced that Eden had received a special message from Japan "on the same general lines" as the Japanese official spokesman's statement of the previous day.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 25.—(P)—Found dead of carbon monoxide in an automobile with the motor running, 20-year-old Robert Edmond Davis had this note in his pocket:

"To make a long story short, no girl . . . no car . . . can't even borrow one even when I want it and when I have the money for it."

"I want a little bit of fun when I'm young. I don't want to grow up and spend my life on some corner. I know if you want anything in this world you have to fight for it."

The Public Utility Commission suggested creation of a seven state area conference to seek removal of trade barriers and conflicting state regulations of motor transportation.

The state pardon board rejected the plea of clemency of Paul Petrillo, South Philadelphia tailor, sentenced to be executed March 31 in Philadelphia's "murder-for-money" case.

Secretary John H. Light, of the Department of Agriculture, told the state in a radio address that Pennsylvania's billion dollar farming industry was organized for national defense.

The legislature's joint state government commission—a continuing research group—presented its final report of a two-year study in various subjects. The 315-page booklet on taxes and tax procedure contained a recommendation for a revised tax setup so "business can expand." It called state income and retail sales taxes the "most promising" of any new levies suggested and recommended simplified tax appeal, assessment and collection systems.

The Senate passed and sent to the House the $14,500,000 deficiency appropriation for relief in March, April and May. It struck out a provision that would give the auditor general and state treasurer equal voice with the governor on how much they should get for writing the relief checks.

House Democrats who inserted this provision did not indicate immediately how they were reacting to the senate's disposal of the provision. If the Senate action is turned down in the House, the bill must go to a conference committee for a compromise version.

Included in the new legislation introduced late last night was a bill with Democratic sponsorship to restore the State Labor Relations act to its status of 1937 when it was put on the books by the Democrats then in control of the legislature and the administration.

Republicans, dominating the assembly in 1938, amended it.

Also into the House came a resolution (D-Cambria), asking an investigation of the use of slag by the state highways department.

Before recessing until 4:30 p. m., the senate passed a bill appropriating $125,000 for construction of a community house and recreation center at Indiantown Gap where the 28th Division of the Pennsylvania National Guard started a year's training this week.

The bill was backed by Major General Edward Martin, commander of the $10,000,000 cantonment. It was sent to the house.

The senate also received a bill sponsored by the State County Commissioners' Association, proposing reorganizing of the county tax and assessment structure. The measure would abolish the present system of electing assessors and lodge authority for making assessments with the commissioners.

Labor trouble struck yesterday at another steel plant, the Youngstown, Ohio, division of Republic Steel Corporation. When 15 crane operators walked out in a wage dispute, the CIO steel workers union charged that foremen undertook the operation of the cranes. Immediately 500 other men walked off. The plant, which has defense orders for pipe, continued to operate.

At Lansing, Mich., 2,500 striking AFL-United Automobile Workers voted on whether to accept a tentative agreement to end a 12-day strike at the Motor Wheel Corporation, which has defense orders totaling $4,000,000.

Labor leaders expressed their dissatisfaction with conditions at the big Ford motor plants in the Detroit area.

An AFL picket line was set up after the firm signed a contract with a CIO union.

Prevention Is Easier Than Cure

BY PAUL BRAUNSCHWEIGER of The Mullen Drug Co.

Before the cradle is occupied, prevention should be employed. The prospective mother owes to the race the protection of the child-to-be. Infancy, childhood, the passing years, each period brings its health problem, no single one the same, each amenable in large degree to prevention.

The doctor infinitely prefers to guard against disease rather than fight it. The great killers, tuberculosis, cancer, cardiac weaknesses are vulnerable if treated in time. They can be to a large extent prevented.

The doctor knows. Consult him in health to prevent the onslaught of illness.

Refer his orders for curative specific to a druggist who knows his job.

Your Nation's Capitol

Then the main act comes on. "Mr. President (of the Senate) I approach the discussion of this historic measure with a profound appreciation . . . for an hour and a half."

Senators sit in their red leather upholstered swivel chairs behind school-like desks in semi-circular rows before the vice president. Republicans to his left, Democrats to his right. Some slouch. Some lean forward. Most listen intently, politely, looking like senators should. Some go on reading. They come and go. Page boys in blue serge knicker suits come and go. Messages. Calls to the corridor. Whispers. From one senator to his neighbor. Some move to other seats, to hear better. But nothing stops the speaker. No loud speaker system here, just old-fashioned oratory, where they yell it out and wave their arms. Some applause when the speaker finishes. It's against the rules, but when the gallery does break loose, the vice president gets tough. No one realized he could be so tough.

Some senator suggests the absence of a quorum, and the roll is called. That's to give everybody a breather. Senators crowd around the brow-mopping speaker to congratulate him on his eloquence. Questions. Answers. More questions and answers. The speaker keeps the floor, yielding to questioners. Democracy is being saved. Liberty is a Latin word; and it is worth thinking about because our liberties are challenged. The word comes from the Latin word "libet," which means "children!"

For an hour and a half. Mostly the speakers read from prepared manuscripts for the main body of the argument. When they come to the conclusion, it's impromptu or from memory with all stops pulled for a grand diapaason.

Congressmen drift over from House of Representatives on the other side of the capitol, lining the back and sidewalks of the Senate floor to see and hear the fireworks. Act III. Another big gun unlimbers and salutes to a conclusion. "Mr. President, I know that the future is dark, that the risks are great, the end uncertain. . . . But if we go step by step, keeping the broad picture ahead of us and in our hearts the firm resolve to keep our faces forward, never turning them to one or the other side, or to the rear, that we shall be able to see our way through and help bring about a better world."

Senate stenographers, working in shifts, take it all down in shorthand, and it's printed in the Congressional Record next day. Newspaper reporters, working from their section of the gallery behind the vice president, hit the highlights and weed out the non-essentials.

The show is over "at 5 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m." until tomorrow noon. Democracy will be at work again tomorrow. The prevailing languages of Latin America are Spanish, French and Portuguese, which are of Latin origin.

SALVATION ARMY OFFICER SPEAKS TO ROTARY CLUB

At the regular meeting of the Rotary Club on Monday, members had the privilege of hearing Major William G. Harris of Pittsburgh, divisional commander of the Salvation Army for western Pennsylvania, who was introduced to the club by Major Flynn of the Warren Corps.

Major Harris used as his subject, "Canteens and Kindness," in which he described the emergency service being rendered by the Salvation Army in the British Isles, through the Emergency Canteen, 1300 of which have been established in England alone. He also described the tremendous responsibility which has been assumed by Salvation Army leaders in the war-torn districts in caring for the injured, destitute, and homeless. The speaker, himself a Royal Air Force veteran of the first World War, stated that in London air raid shelters 100,000 people are being fed nightly by the Salvation Army.

"A number of small tasks, well done," was the way Major Harris described Salvation Army work. There is no place for individual heroes and heroines. Service to mankind is the motivating spirit. Guests at Monday's meeting included Mrs. Harris and Mrs. Flynn of the Salvation Army; Joseph Summerville, guest student from Warren High School; and Rev. E. Pinkney Wroth, vice chairman of the local Salvation Army Advisory Board.
